I thought the conversation about what staff members are doing while they are roving was interesting. I can see how they could straighten shelves or put up displays but weeding and shelving were also mentioned. I would think that weeding would interfere, but apparently some systems have had success with this strategy. Is there a list of activities that can be done while roving? I think this was mentioned in the discussion. In my system (AACPL) we encourage staff members to rove while they are not on the desk but also not doing other assignments. I'd like to hear more creative ideas regarding this subject.

While roaming, you can also...

Here is a list that we put together here at Miller:

Watch for customers who need help

Answer customer questions about technology issues or materials;

Retrieve items on the "Requests" list three times daily

Check materials displays on the floor ensuring they are stocked;

Straighten and shelf read an area of the collection;

Refill paper in printers and copiers

Shelve materials when appropriate—CDs/DVDs/new books/adult/YA, letting the other roamer know where you are

Does that help?

Susan
